

Abstract (Figure 1)

Visual structural functional textile clothing designs are created using a programmed computer and advanced 5 computing techniques. The computer is supplied with information from a number of data bases relating to human body properties and relating to textile material characteristics. The method is used to generate functional designs that are visually displayed for use 10 by a textile designer or engineer.